Making trade policy coherent in Nepal

Promotion of industrialization and exports is a key component of Nepal's trade and industrial policy as well as other sectoral policies. However, progress in both industrialization and exports remain lacklustre. A poor state of coordination among different government agencies has been identified, including by government's policy documents such as Nepal Trade Integration Strategy, as a major impediment to the proper implementation of government's policy. A SAWTEE study "Trade Policy Coherence and Coordination in Nepal: An Exploratory Assessment" highlights some of the coordination issues.

For instance, lack of coordination between industrial and export promotion agencies (different government agencies under the Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Supplies) and revenue-related agencies (different government agencies under the Ministry of Finance) have resulted in lack of implementation of some of the industrial and export promotion tools such as facilities and concessions accorded to industries. Furthermore, it has fostered an environment of uncertainty among industries regarding the incentives provided by the law.

Textiles and clothing in Asian graduating LDCs: Challenges and options

Textile and clothing firms in Bangladesh, Cambodia, Lao PDR, Myanmar and Nepal risk losing trade preferences in the near future, as their countries move from least developed to developing country status. This report outlines country strategies to address the transition for this important sector. ITC's contribution included a survey of international fashion brands, retailers, sourcing agents and local manufacturers.

This UN publication combines research on trade (World Trade Organization), global value chains (UN Conference on Trade and Development), firm-level perspectives (International Trade Centre), and country studies (UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs).
